MEMORANDUM OPINION

GÓMEZ, C.J.

Before the Court is the motion of the defendants, the Government of the Virgin Islands (the "Government"); Roy Martin, in his official capacity as Tax Assessor ("Martin"); and the Board of Tax Review (collectively referred to as the "Defendants"), to lift a permanent injunction issued by this Court. The Defendants seek relief pursuant to Rule 60(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure ("Rule 60(b)").

I. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

A. The Berne Litigation

In 1936, Congress promulgated legislation to harmonize property taxes in the U.S. Virgin Islands across different types and uses of land and to reduce the burden of taxation on land in productive use (the "1936 Act").¹ See 48 U.S.C. §§ 1401-1401e. The 1936 Act provided that "all taxes on real property in the Virgin Islands shall be computed on the basis of the actual value of such property" Id. at § 1401a. Despite that provision, over a period of time the Defendants assessed the value of commercial properties based on replacement value, rather than the actual value. Consequently, plaintiffs Berne Corporation and B&B Corporation (collectively referred to as "Berne") sued Martin in his official capacity under Section 1 of the Civil Rights Act of 1871, 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and Title 5, ¹ Congress has plenary authority under the Constitution to govern the U.S. Virgin Islands. See U.S. CONST. art. IV, § 3, cl. 2 ("The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States").

Section 80 of the Virgin Islands Code ("Section 80").² Berne sought an injunction to require Martin to assess its property on its actual value, as required by the 1936 Act.

On September 21, 2000, this Court ruled that the 1936 Act "creates a federally protected right actionable pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983." See Berne Corporation v. Gov't of the Virgin Islands, 120 F. Supp. 2d 528, 535 (D.V.I. 2000), aff'd 105 Fed. Appx. 324 (3d Cir. 2004). The Court further held that Berne had standing to bring its suit under Section 80 on behalf of all similarly situated taxpayers to restrain violations of the statute requiring property taxes to be based on actual value. See id. In that same decision, the Court preliminarily enjoined the Government and Martin from assessing and collecting commercial property taxes in violation of the 1936 Act.

Following the Court's ruling, the parties negotiated a settlement (the "Berne Settlement"), which the Court approved on December 19, 2000. The Berne Settlement provided that the Government and Martin would bring the Virgin Islands real property tax system into compliance with the federal requirement that property be assessed at its actual value.³ Pursuant to the Berne Settlement, the parties stipulated to the selection of a Special Master. The Court subsequently approved the Special Master selected by the parties.

While the new tax assessment system was being implemented pursuant to the Berne Settlement, the other plaintiffs in this matter (Berne and these other plaintiffs are collectively referred to as the "Plaintiffs") filed lawsuits in this Court to challenge their tax bills based on the pre-Berne Settlement tax

³ The Settlement also provided that the parties would mutually agree on the selection of a Special Master to . . . . review the procedures and process to be used by the Virgin Islands Tax Assessor's office in appraising commercial properties pursuant to a mass appraisal approach and Uniform Standards of Professional Appraisal Practice (Hereinafter referred to as "USPAP") Standards. For appeal purposes only, USPAP standards for single property appraisal will apply. (Subject to Jurisdictional Exception of USPAP)

. . . . certify the procedures to be used as proper.

. . . . do appropriate random sampling, of no more than ten percent 10%, of assessments for compliance [and]

. . . . submit a report to the Court, as to compliance, every 180 days for a period of two (2) years.

assessment system. One of those Plaintiffs, Equivest St. Thomas, Inc., successor to Bluebeard's Castle, Inc. ("Equivest"), moved for a preliminary injunction to enjoin the collection of its 2000 property tax bills. The Defendants thereafter filed a motion to stay all discovery except document production, and, as this Court noted, "made a binding judicial admission that 'pursuant to the terms of that settlement, all commercial property in the Virgin Islands is to be appraised at actual value in accordance with [the 1936 Act] . . . and in accordance with the Uniform Standards of Professional Appraisal Practice.'" See Berne Corp. v. Gov't of the V.I., 262 F. Supp. 2d 540, 549 (D.V.I. 2003) (quoting Defs.' Mot. to Stay Disc., at ¶ 1 (filed in Civ. No. 2001-155)). The Defendants further agreed to extend the Berne Settlement to residential properties, and asserted its willingness to settle all of the newly-filed cases. See id.

B. The May 12, 2003 Decree

The Government's subsequent settlement negotiations with Equivest proved fruitless. As a result, Equivest renewed its motion for a preliminary injunction. The Court scheduled a trial on the merits.

On May 12, 2003, the Court issued a permanent injunction (the "May 12, 2003 Decree"). The May 12, 2003 Decree enjoined the Defendants from assessing any and all real property in the Virgin Islands. The Court also enjoined the Defendants from requiring the payment of real property tax bills. The Court required satisfaction of two primary conditions before the government could assess real property and issue tax bills. The first condition was the establishment of a property tax system that reliably and credibly assessed and taxed all real property based on its actual value. See id. at 575. The second condition required the Government to demonstrate to the Court's satisfaction that it has a functioning Board of Tax Review that consistently holds hearings and reaches determinations on appeals within sixty days.⁴ See id. The Court also held that the Government could issue bills based on the assessment values for the 1998 calendar year reflected in the 1999 tax bills if it provided a mechanism to adjust the assessments and bills retroactively. Thereafter, the Legislature of the Virgin Islands passed Act No. 6586 ("Act 6586"), which provided for such a mechanism. That act was signed into law on July 14, 2003.

In that same Order, the Court further held that the Berne Settlement applied to all real property owners in the Virgin Islands, and that the Defendants had breached the Berne

Settlement by, inter alia, failing to fund the tax reassessment system. Consequently, the Court ordered specific performance of the Berne Settlement.⁵ See id. at 574-75.

On August 13, 2003, on the Defendants' motion, the Court modified the May 12, 2003 Decree. The Court found that, in light of Act 6586, the Government had "acted sufficiently to provide relief for the Territory's taxpayers and . . . that the Government is entitled to collect revenue from property taxes." In re Tax Litig., 276 F. Supp. 2d 435, 436 (D.V.I. 2003). Therefore, the Court modified the May 12, 2003, Decree "to allow the Government to issue tax bills based on the 1998 assessments reflected in the 1999 tax bills." Id. The Court noted that the Decree "shall remain unmodified and in full effect for all parties to this litigation." Id. Aside from the August 13, 2003, modification, the May 12, 2003, Decree remains in full force and effect.

⁵ The Court issued separate opinions regarding the implementation of the Berne Settlement as to the plaintiffs in this matter on an individual basis. See, e.g., Cyril V. Francois Assocs, LLC v. Gov't of the V.I., 313 F. Supp. 2d 514, 515 (D.V.I. 2004) ("All that remains for resolution in this case is application of [the Berne Injunction] to the unique facts posed in this individual action.").

C. The Repeal Act

On June 29, 2007, Congress repealed the 1936 Act, retroactive to July 22, 1954 (the "Repeal Act").

The Defendants subsequently filed the motion now before the Court. The Defendants argue that the Court should vacate the May 12, 2003 Decree, and dismiss this matter. The Defendants argue that the 1936 Act was the sole basis of the Plaintiffs' lawsuits, and that it was repealed by Congress on July 29, 2007, retroactive to July 22, 1954.⁶ The Defendants also argue that the Berne Settlement is no longer binding. The Defendants did not address whether the Board of Tax Review was functioning in accordance with the May 12, 2003 Decree in the motion to vacate.

In the wake of the Repeal Act, on March 10, 2008, the Governor of the Virgin Islands signed into law Act No. 6991 ("Act 6991"). Act 6991 amends or repeals several sections of Title 33 of the Virgin Islands Code, which sets forth the laws governing taxation and finance in the territory.

On April 10, 2008, the Special Master designated by the parties pursuant to the Berne Settlement filed a report with the ⁶ The Court held a status conference with the parties in this matter on March 4, 2008. The Court thereafter ordered the Defendants to file a supplemental brief by April 1, 2008, and the Plaintiffs to file a responsive brief by April 15, 2008. Both sides have filed briefs per the Court's order.

Court. In that report, the Special Master concluded that the Defendants are in compliance with the May 12, 2003 Decree. The Special Master also offered several observations about the tax reassessment scheme and specified that his opinion was subject to a series of conditions set forth in the report. The Plaintiffs timely filed objections to the Special Master's report pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(f)(2)⁷, and requested a hearing on the report pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53(f)(1).⁸ The Court held such a hearing on June 19, 2008.

Review, on July 2, 2008, the Court held an evidentiary hearing to determine whether the Board is functioning in a manner consistent with the May 12, 2003 Decree. At the hearing, the Government presented the testimony of Claudette Watson Anderson ("Anderson"), Commissioner of Finance. Anderson testified that she was appointed as the Commissioner of Finance in May, 2007, and confirmed by the Legislature of the Virgin Islands (the "Legislature") in July, 2007. Anderson also testified that she is the chairperson of the Board of Tax Review, which is made up of five individuals, including herself. Four members are required to reach a quorum. The Board of Tax Review started out with an appropriation of about $173,000, and was given an additional $559,000 in funding by the Legislature. Anderson further testified that she was aware that the Legislature authorized the Board of Tax Review to hire hearing examiners. To that end, Anderson testified that the Board has approached three individuals, but that no hearing examiners have been hired.

Anderson also testified that the Board of Tax Review held two meetings in 2008. The first meeting was held on May 30, 2008. On that date, the Board decided eighty-four cases for twelve taxpayers. The second meeting was held on June 27, 2008. On that date, the Board decided thirty-seven cases for twenty-seven taxpayers. A total of 374 appeals remain pending. Of the twelve taxpayers whose appeals were heard on May 30, 2008, none of them were present. Anderson could not state whether those persons were given notice that their appeals would be heard on that day.

The Government also called Walter L. Challenger ("Challenger"), Executive Director of the Board of Tax Review, as a witness at the hearing. Like Anderson, Challenger testified that there was a total of about 374 appeals pending. Challenger also testified that for the May 30, 2008, hearing, only some of the taxpayers received a notice. Challenger also testified that to arrive at the 374 figure for pending appeals, three administrative assistants at the Board of Tax Review manually went through each file to determine whether an appeal was pending for that taxpayer. Challenger also testified that after the May 12, 2003 Decree, the Board made plans to meet every month to speed up the appellate process. Challenger also testified that 200 reversion letters⁹ were sent out to taxpayers, which also helped to decrease the number of pending appeals.

At the close of the hearing, the Court requested supplemental briefing from the parties regarding the 200 reversion letters that were sent out. On July 7, 2008, the Court issued an Order directing the Government to file a sworn statement attesting to the number of meetings convened by the Board between May 12, 2003 and April 30, 2008, and identifying the number of appeals resolved during that time period.

In response to the Court's Order, the Government submitted the sworn statement of Challenger. In his affidavit, Challenger stated that the Board held meetings on the following dates: January 31, 2006, April 25, 2006, May 30, 2006, June 21, 2006, July 25, 2006, and January 31, 2007. Within that time period, Challenger stated that 808 appeals were resolved; 249 were resolved through meetings; 559 were resolved through reversion letters and settlements; and an undisclosed amount were resolved through withdrawals.

II. DISCUSSION

Rule 60(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides, in pertinent part:

On motion and just terms, the court may relieve a party or its legal representative from a final judgment, order, or proceeding for the following reasons:

(5) the judgment has been satisfied, released, or discharged; it is based on an earlier judgment that has been reversed or vacated; or applying it prospectively is no longer equitable; or

(6) any other reason that justifies relief.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b).

A Rule 60(b)(5) motion may be granted "when the party seeking relief from an injunction . . . can show 'a significant change either in factual conditions or in law.'" Agostini v. Felton, 521 U.S. 203, 215, 117 S.Ct. 1997, 138 L.Ed.2d 391 (1997) (quoting Rufo v. Inmates of Suffolk County Jail, 502 U.S. 367, 384, 112 S.Ct. 748, 116 L.Ed.2d 867 (1992)). A change in law can also qualify as one of the "other reasons" justifying relief under Rule 60(b)(6). While "intervening developments in the law by themselves rarely constitute the extraordinary circumstances required for relief under Rule 60(b)(6)," Agostini, 521 U.S. at 239, "a supervening change in governing law that calls into question the correctness of the court's judgment may . . . constitute such an extraordinary circumstance justifying the granting of a Rule 60(b) motion." Tal v. Miller, Civ. No. 97-2275, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 652, at *5 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 27, 1999) (citing Sargent v. Columbia Forest Products, Inc., 75 F.3d 86, 90 (2d Cir. 1996)) (unpublished); see also In re Fine Paper Antitrust Litigation, 840 F.2d 188, 194 (3d Cir. 1988) ("[T]he Rule 60(b)(6) ground for relief from judgment provides for extraordinary relief and may only be invoked upon a showing of exceptional circumstances.") (quotation omitted).

III. ANALYSIS

As discussed above, the May 12, 2003 Decree imposed two mandates: (1) the Government must credibly assess and tax real property at its actual value in accordance with the 1936 Act, and (2) the Government must have a functioning Board of Tax Review. The continued validity of each of those mandates is reviewed in turn to determine whether vacatur is appropriate.

A. The Requirement to Assess Real Property in Accordance With the 1936 Act

The Defendants contend, and the Plaintiffs do not dispute, that Congress has repealed the 1936 Act by way of the Repeal Act. See Pub. L. 110-40, 121 Stat. 232 (2007). The parties also agree that the 1936 Act purports to have retroactive effect to 1954.¹⁰

¹⁰ Ordinarily, whether a statute has retroactive effect is a question determined according to a two-part test, as articulated by the Supreme Court in Landgraf v. USI Film Products, 511 U.S. 244, 114 S.Ct. 1483, 128 L.Ed.2d 229 (1994). "Requiring clear intent assures that Congress itself has affirmatively considered the potential unfairness of retroactive application and determined that it is an acceptable price to pay for the countervailing benefits." Id. at 272-73. The Supreme Court has explained that "in determining a statute's temporal reach, generally, our normal rules of construction apply" Lindh v. Murphy, 521 U.S. 320, 326, 117 S.Ct. 2059, 138 L.Ed.2d 481 (1997). The inquiry is as follows:

We first look to whether Congress has expressly prescribed the statute's proper reach, and in the

2001-197, 2001-228, 2002-057

The Defendants assert that the legislation that formed the basis for the May 12, 2003 Decree no longer exists. Because of the 1936 Act's retroactive repeal, the Defendants contend there is no legal underpinning for the May 12, 2003 Decree. As such, they claim that Rule 60(b) requires vacatur.

Rule 60(b)(5) "empowers a court to modify a judgment only if it is 'prospective,' or executory." Marshall v. Bd. of Education, 575 F.2d 417, 425 (3d Cir. 1978) (finding that a judgment for monetary damages that had been paid was not prospective). "A 'prospective' injunction envisions a restraint of future conduct, not an order to remedy past wrongs when the compensation payment is withheld from the beneficiaries until some subsequent date." Id. at 425 n.27.

absence of language as helpful as that we try to draw a comparably firm conclusion about the temporal reach specifically intended by applying our normal rules of construction. If that effort fails, we ask whether applying the statute to the person objecting would have a retroactive consequence in the disfavored sense of affecting substantive rights, liabilities, or duties [on the basis of] conduct arising before [its] enactment.

Fernandez-Vargas v. Gonzales, 548 U.S. 30, 37, 126 S.Ct. 2422, 165 L.Ed.2d 323 (2006) (internal citations and quotations omitted) (alterations in original).

Here, the Repeal Act unambiguously states that "[t]his section shall be deemed to have taken effect on July 22, 1954." The Court therefore finds that Congress' intent to make the statute retroactive is clear and unambiguous.

The Supreme Court has explained that because Rule 60(b)(5) "encompasses the traditional power of a court of equity to modify its decree in light of changed circumstances," Frew v. Hawkins, 540 U.S. 431, 441, 124 S.Ct. 899, 157 L.Ed.2d 855 (2004), the Court "should apply a 'flexible standard' to the modification of consent decrees when a significant change in facts or law warrants their amendment." Id. (citing Rufo v. Inmates of Suffolk County Jail, 502 U.S. 367, 393, 112 S.Ct. 748, 116 L.Ed.2d 867 (1992)). Under that standard, "[a] party seeking modification of an [injunction] may meet its initial burden by showing a significant change either in factual conditions or in law." Rufo, 502 U.S. at 384. If the moving party meets that burden, "the court should consider whether the proposed modification is suitably tailored to the changed circumstance." Id. at 383.

Modification may likewise "be warranted when the statutory or decisional law has changed to make legal what the decree was designed to prevent." Id. at 388. The Supreme Court has also admonished that "[a] court errs when it refuses to modify an injunction or consent decree in light of [significant] changes." See, e.g., Agostini, 521 U.S. at 215 (citing System Federation, 364 U.S. at 647 ("The court cannot be required to disregard significant changes in law or facts if it is satisfied that what it has been doing has been turned through changed circumstances into an instrument of wrong.") (quotation omitted)).

Here, the May 12, 2003 Decree prevents the Defendants from assessing the Plaintiffs' real properties until a reliable and credible appraisal system is put in place, in compliance with the 1936 Act. See Berne Corp. v. Gov't of the V.I., 262 F. Supp. 2d 540, 571 (D.V.I. 2003). Significantly, that mandate creates an ongoing and prospective obligation to comply with a statute that no longer exists.

The rationale behind that directive - the need to comply with then current federal law - evaporated with the repeal of the 1936 Act. By removing the possibility of violating the 1936 Act, the Repeal Act made legal what the May 12, 2003 Decree sought to prevent.

Nonetheless, the Plaintiffs raise two arguments in opposition to the vacatur motion. First, the Plaintiffs argue that the Repeal Act violates the separation of powers doctrine. Second, the Plaintiffs argue that Act 6991 violates their rights under the Contract Clause of the constitution. Both arguments will be addressed in turn.

1. Separation of Powers

The Plaintiffs contend that the Repeal Act offends the separation-of-powers doctrine because of its "purpose of achieving a specific result in the instant litigation” (Pls.’ Supp. Mem. in Opp’n to Mot. to Lift Permanent Inj. and Vacate Ct.’s May 12, 2003 Order and Decree 9) [hereinafter Pls.’

Berne Corp., et al. v. Gov't of the V.I., et al.

Supp. Mem. in Opp’n]. This argument is essentially twofold. The Plaintiffs appear to suggest that the Repeal Act is void to the extent it (1) reopens a final judgment of this Court and (2) prescribes a rule of decision in a pending case. Neither of these arguments passes muster.

a. Reopening a Final Judgment

The Plaintiffs’ contention that the Repeal Act is void to the extent it reopens a final judgment of this Court, is predicated on the Supreme Court’s decision in Plaut v.
Spendthrift Farm, Inc., 514 U.S. 211, 115 S.Ct. 1447, 131 L.Ed.2d 328 (1995). The Plaintiffs put forward little effort, however, to explain how that decision serves their cause.

In Plaut, the Supreme Court held that a federal statute that required federal courts to reopen final judgments that had been entered before the statute’s enactment, was unconstitutional on separation-of-powers grounds. Id. at 211. In a subsequent decision, the Supreme Court explained that this retroactive command that federal courts reopen final judgments exceeded Congress’ authority. The decision of an inferior court within the Article III hierarchy is not the final word of the department (unless the time for appeal has expired), and it is the obligation of the last court in the hierarchy that rules on the case to give effect to Congress's latest enactment, even when that has the effect of overturning the judgment of an inferior court, since each court, at every level, must decide according to existing laws. But once a judicial decision achieves finality, it becomes the last word of the judicial department. And because Article III gives the Federal Judiciary the power, not merely to rule on cases, but to decide them, subject to review only by superior courts in the Article III hierarchy, the judicial Power is one to render dispositive judgments, and Congress cannot retroactively command Article III courts to reopen final judgments.

Berne Corp., et al. v. Gov't of the V.I., et al.

Miller v. French, 530 U.S. 327, 344, 120 S.Ct. 2246, 147 L.Ed.2d 326 (2000) (explaining the rationale behind the Plaut holding) (internal quotations and citations omitted).

The Plaut Court also explained that while "the separation-of-powers doctrine generally forbids Congress from reversing final judgments in a suit for money damages, . . . [it] noted that this rule does not apply to legislation that merely 'alters the prospective effect of injunctions entered by Article III courts.'" See Imprisoned Citizens Union, 169 F.3d at 183 (quoting Plaut, 514 U.S. at 232); see also Benjamin v. Jacobson, 172 F.3d 144, 161 (2d Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 824 (1999) ("Under the separation of powers, Congress lacks the authority to alter a finally rendered judgment ordering the payment of money. require alteration or termination of its future effect if the law on which the injunction was predicated has been changed.").

The decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit in Imprisoned Citizens Union v. Ridge, 169 F.3d 178 (3d Cir. 1999) is instructive. In that case, the Third Circuit held that a consent decree was not "impervious to legislative modification" because, as "a judgment awarding prospective injunctive relief," it "is necessarily altered every time a change in law brings [its] terms in conflict with statutory objectives." Id. at 184 (quotation omitted).

Applying the standards outlined above,¹¹ the Court does not find that the Repeal Act unconstitutionally reopens a judgment of this Court. Rather, that act merely changed the underlying law that constituted the legal grounds for the May 12, 2003 Decree. As such, the Plaintiffs cannot enforce a right that the 1936 Act no longer furnishes. That result obtains whether the Court's Decree is through litigation or by consent.

In either event, a court does not abdicate its power to revoke or modify its mandate, if satisfied that ¹¹ Although Imprisoned Citizens Union dealt with a consent decree, the principles articulated in that and similar decisions are equally applicable to the May 12, 2003 Decree. See Halderman v. Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp., 901 F.2d 311, 318 n.9 (3d Cir. 1990) (citing Williams v. Vukovich, 720 F.2d 909, 920 (6th Cir. 1983) ("A consent decree is essentially a settlement agreement subject to continued judicial policing.")).

what it has been doing has been turned through 286 U.S. 106, 114-15, 52 S.Ct. 460, 76 L.Ed. 999 (1932)).

b. Prescribing a Rule of Decision

The Plaintiffs rely on the Supreme Court's decision in United States v. Klein, 80 U.S. 128, 20 L.Ed. 519, 13 Wall. 128 (1871), for the proposition that the Repeal Act "constitutes impermissible legislative interference with the judiciary." (Pls.' Supp. Mem. in Opp'n 9.) The Plaintiffs offer little, if any, explanation of how the principles articulated in Klein apply to the matter before this Court.

In Klein, the Supreme Court considered the constitutionality of a federal statute passed after the Civil War that was intended to prevent pardoned ex-Confederates from reclaiming seized property. The statute provided that a presidential pardon was conclusive evidence that a pardoned person had been disloyal to the United States. Id. at 143-44. The statute further stated that a pardon could not constitute evidence of loyalty in a lawsuit to reclaim confiscated property from the United States, and required the Court to dismiss all such lawsuits pending on appeal in which a pardoned person had prevailed. Id. at 144. In declaring the statute unconstitutional, the Court reasoned that Congress was in effect prescribing the rule of decision for pending cases. Id. at 147. That outcome, the Court concluded, violated the separation-of-powers doctrine. Id.

Berne Corp., et al. v. Gov't of the V.I., et al.

The Plaintiffs' reliance on Klein is misplaced. In Biodiversity Assocs. v. Cables, 357 F.3d 1152 (10th Cir. 2004), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 817 (2004), the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit explained:

When Congress does not control the substance of a right, there are limits to its ability to influence the judiciary's determination of that right, either by directing the judiciary to decide a particular way, or by setting aside judicial determinations after the fact. But when rights are the creatures of Congress . . . Congress is free to modify them at will, even though its action may dictate results in pending cases and terminate prospective relief in concluded ones. Thus, Klein's prohibition on prescribing rules of decision in pending cases has no application to public rights cases

Id. at 1171.

That position was not new. Indeed, the Supreme Court previously had noted:

[T]he private rights of parties which have been vested by the judgment of a court cannot be taken away by subsequent legislation, but must be thereafter enforced by the court regardless of such legislation.

This rule, however, . . . does not apply to a suit brought for the enforcement of a public right,

Berne Corp., et al. v. Gov't of the V.I., et al.
Civil Nos. 2000-141, 2000-167, 2001-151, 2001-155, 2001-181, 2001-196, which, even after it has been established by the judgment of the court, may be annulled by subsequent legislation and should not be thereafter enforced; although, in so far as a private right has been incidentally established by such judgment, as for special damages to the plaintiff or for his costs, it may not be thus taken away.

Hodges v. Snyder, 261 U.S. 600, 603-04, 43 S.Ct. 435, 67 L.Ed. 819 (1923) (internal citations omitted).

The property tax assessment system in the 1936 Act was a creation of Congress. It is properly characterized as a public right to which Klein has no application.

2. Contract Clause

The Plaintiffs also appear to claim that Act 6991 impairs a contractual right. According to the Plaintiffs, any tax legislation codified at Title 33 is void because "[w]hen a state itself enters into a contract, it cannot simply walk away from its financial obligations." (Pls.' Mem. In Opp'n 13.) The Plaintiffs' argument is unsupported in law and must fail.

The Contract Clause provides that "no State shall . . . pass any . . . Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts." U.S. Const. art. I, § 10, cl. 1. The Contract Clause extends to the Virgin Islands by virtue of the Revised Organic Act of 1954, 48 U.S.C. § 1561 ("No law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be enacted."). See Nieves v. Hess Oil V.I. Corp., 819 F.2d 1237, 1243 (3d Cir. 1987).

The Berne Settlement is the only contract to which the Government and the Plaintiffs are parties. Significantly, that contract requires that the Government bring its property tax system into compliance with federal law. However, there no longer is any relevant federal law with which the government must comply since the 1936 Act has been repealed. That result was not occasioned by the local government. Rather, it was the result of the Repeal Act. The Plaintiffs' Contract Clause objection, therefore, essentially is a complaint derived from the effect of the Repeal Act.

Any claim to the effect that the Repeal Act itself contravenes the Contract Clause is without merit, as the Contract Clause does not constrain Congress. See Nieves v. Hess Oil V.I. Corp., 819 F.2d 1237, 1251 (3d Cir. 1987) (noting that the Contract Clause "is not applicable to the federal government"), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 963 (1987). Consequently, the Court fails to understand how Act 6991 substantially, or even minimally, impairs any contractual right the Plaintiffs purport to possess.

In sum, none of the Plaintiffs' objections to Rule 60(b) relief are convincing. Indeed, given the current legal landscape, the public interest would be best served by relieving the Government of its obligation to comply with the 1936 Act. Accordingly, the Court finds that vacatur of that portion of the

May 12, 2003 Decree that requires that real property be assessed in accordance with the 1936 Act is appropriate. To hold otherwise would effectively require the Government to comply with an Order deprived of its legal mandate.

B. The Requirement to Have a Functioning Board of Tax Review

Although the Court has determined that the reassessment portion of the May 12, 2003 Decree must be vacated, that does not complete the Rule 60(b) inquiry.

In addition to the reassessment requirement, the May 12, 2003 Decree requires that, prior to the issuance of any tax bills that reflect a rate other than the 1998 rate, the Board of Tax Review must (1) consistently hold hearings on appeals, and (2) make timely decisions on those appeals. The Defendants appear to contend that this requirement in the May 12, 2003 Decree is immaterial to the Court's determination of whether to vacate the May 12, 2003 Decree in its entirety. The Court disagrees.

A functioning Board of Tax Review was the remedy prescribed for the constitutional due process injury caused by the Government. Unless and until that remedy was administered, the Defendants were enjoined. Indeed, the conditions which need to be satisfied prior to obtaining relief from the injunction - reassessment and a functioning Board of Tax Review -- were not disjunctive options. They were conjunctive mandates.

Berne Corp., et al. v. Gov't of the V.I., et al.
Civil Nos. 2000-141, 2000-167, 2001-151, 2001-155, 2001-181, 2001-196, 2001-197, 2001-228, 2002-057
Memorandum Opinion

Accordingly, the Court's inquiry would not be complete without reviewing the Defendants' compliance with the second major condition of the May 12, 2003 Decree.

The record in this matter reveals that the Board of Tax Review is functioning to some degree. However, major aspects of the Board's operations leave the Court with significant doubts about its functioning. The testimony of Anderson and Challenger shows that taxpayers whose appeals are being decided in 2008 have not been receiving sufficient notice and opportunity to be heard before their appeals come before the Board of Tax Review. Furthermore, while Challenger's affidavit established that six meetings were conducted in 2006 and 2007, it did not state whether a quorum was present at each of those six meetings. Also missing from Challenger's statement was whether the taxpayer's were afforded notice of these hearings and an opportunity to be heard. Given the testimony elicited at the evidentiary hearing, it is unlikely that the Board provided such notice in 2006 and 2007, when it failed to do so in 2008.

The record is also devoid of any indication that the Board of Tax Review is able to establish a consistent method of managing its docket so as to provide for the efficient resolution of pending appeals. For instance, at the July 2, 2008, hearing

Berne Corp., et al. v. Gov't of the V.I., et al.
Civil Nos. 2000-141, 2000-167, 2001-151, 2001-155, 2001-181, 2001-196, 2001-197, 2001-228, 2002-057
Memorandum Opinion

Challenger was examined about the manner in which the Board functions:

Q: And as part of your duties as the director, do you, are you the one who selects which cases should be heard?

A: Yes.

Q: And how do you make that selection?

A: Sometimes I use the method of the first-come, the first-out.

The other times if there are other circumstances, I might mix them together.

(Hr'g Tr. at --, July 2, 2008.) Clearly, there is no reliable and established procedure to determine the order in which appeals will be heard.

Similarly absent from the record is any evidence to suggest that the Board of Tax Review is maintaining reliable records.
For example, at the July 2, 2008, hearing, the Defendants' attorney asked Challenger how he determined the number of appeals pending before the Board. Challenger responded:

A: When an appellant files an appeal they bring a piece of paper which is the appeal form and we keep the record of that by name.

Q: And how do you determine which, how -- you keep that record, is there any other record that you keep in your office with respect to the appeals?

A: Yes, we keep what I call a register.

Civil Nos. 2000-141, 2000-167, 2001-151, 2001-155, 2001-181, 2001-196,

A: The register is recording the appeals and there's a portion of the register that describe the action for those appeals. And if an appeal is heard, the determination of that appeal should be recorded in the register.

Q: You said should, is it always recorded in the register?

A: No.

THE COURT: Mr. Challenger, if it's not recorded in the register, how is it that you are aware of the number, how is it accounted for?

THE WITNESS: Go back to the personal file, sir.

THE COURT: All right. Is there any electronic recording of appeals as they are filed.

THE WITNESS: No, sir.

[PLAINTIFF'S ATTORNEY]: Did you do anything yourself to verify the numbers they reported to you were accurate?

A: What they gave me I checked to see if the numbers they gave me is accurate.

Q: And how did you check that?

A: From the paper that they gave me.

Q: How did you check the numbers that they gave you were accurate based on the paper that they gave you?

A: Counting them.

Q: Did you go back into the files and verify it?

A: No.

(Id. at --.) That system appears haphazard and fails to instill confidence in the Court that the Board of Tax Review has a reliable system in place to ensure timely consideration of appeals.

The Government has failed to show any consistency with the hearings held by the Board. The Government has also failed to show that the Board reached decisions on all appeals or that refunds resulting from the Board decision were remitted within the required time. Although authorized by the legislature, no hearing examiners have been hired. Even more troubling is the fact that since January 31, 2007, there have only been two Board meetings, both of which occurred in 2008. In sum, the Board's attempts to comply with the May 12, 2003 Decree have been sporadic, short-lived, and of recent vintage.

To its credit, the Government has shown that there is a good faith commitment by certain players to have the Board comply with the May 12, 2003 Decree. Given the history of this case, however, that good faith commitment is not enough. Indeed, two hearings held within four-weeks of each other and immediately before a hearing on the Board's compliance do not indicate consistency. Furthermore, the fact that 374 appeals remain pending before the Board does not show that the Board is capable of making decisions quickly and efficiently.

Accordingly, the Court finds that the Government has failed to show that the Board of Tax Review is functioning to a degree where it provides a plain, speedy, and efficient remedy for challenging property taxes as required by the May 12, 2003 Decree.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the reasons discussed above, the Court will vacate that portion of the May 12, 2003 Decree that requires that real property be assessed in compliance with the 1936 Act. Because the current state of the Tax Review Board is deficient, the Court will deny the Defendants' request with respect to that portion of the May 12, 2003 Decree that requires a functioning Board of Tax Review prior to the issuance of tax bills that reflect a rate other than the 1998 rate. The Court will continue to monitor the Board of Tax Review on a quarterly basis to determine whether the Defendants are in compliance with the May 12, 2003 Decree.
